Peter Bock-Schroeder Lake Titikaka 1952

Peter Bock-Schroeder was a German photographer, and photojournalist whose work captured the world of the 20th century in striking images. His photography is characterized by documentary precision, humanist curiosity, and a clear visual language.

Born in Hamburg in 1913, Bock-Schroeder began his career as a photographer in the 1930s. After World War II, he worked for leading German magazines such as Stern, Quick, and the Münchner Illustrierte. His post-war reports documented social reconstruction and Europe's new self-perception.

His photographic journeys took him far beyond Germany's borders, across Europe, to America (North and South), the Middle East, and the Soviet Union. Everywhere he went, he sought out authentic moments where history became tangible.

In addition to his reports, Bock-Schroeder created impressive portraits of significant figures of his time: Gunther Sachs, Brigitte Bardot, Herbert von Karajan, Charles Wilp, Willy Brandt, and Count Goertz. These works combine stylistic clarity with psychological depth, revealing the sensitive observer behind the camera.

Among his documentary projects are the reportage on Huis Doorn, the exile residence of Kaiser Wilhelm II in the Netherlands, as well as his New York series, in which he captured urban life between optimism and anonymity.

Peter Bock-Schroeder passed away in Munich in 2001. Today, his extensive photographic legacy is preserved, researched, and internationally represented by the Collection Bock-Schroeder.

His work is considered an important contribution to European and transatlantic post-war photography, a visual testimony to history, movement, and humanity.
